"TAMING THE EAST"

a two reel CENTURY Comedy
starring Buddy Messinger

Buddy and a plump pal decide to be real western bad men, and bedeck themselves in guns and cowboy regalia. Espying two rams, the boys give chase. While the plump one twists his head around the corner of a shed, one of the animals butts him from behind, hurling him towards a lion cage. Buddy rescues him before the lion gets hungry.

The sheriff's crowd espies them,--especially the fat one, bouncing up and down, as tho he were riding a bucking bronco. When they get around the fence, the boys hide their hobby horse and point to an 'outlaw'. Then the sheriff make's the plump one ride the horse, and he is thrown.

Getting word that the sheriff's gang plan to rob the bank, the plump one gets their first and carries off the treasury. Buddy loosens their saddles, and ties ropes from a tree, overhead. Their horses run free, leaving the bad men suspended.

Fatty gets to the president, gives him the money and is rewarded by an invitation to his home. The boys ride up in their horses and <sup>meet</sup> ~~met~~ the bankers two daughters. At an informal affair, fatty empties his revolvers, putting the bullets in his pockets. A tough guy enters and slams him around. The bullets explode and everybody beats it. But in the end, Buddy and his pal each carry off a fair bride, riding away in search of more adventure.
